

2019 INTERNATIONAL SPEAKER TOURS

Dr Martin Teicher

Dr Martin Teicher has been at the centre of research about the developmental consequences of childhood trauma for over 30 years. He has over 150 publications that have informed so much of what we now take for granted in the field of trauma-informed practice. Research pioneered by Martin and his team demonstrated for the first time that childhood maltreatment alters brain structure and function, depending on the type of abuse and the stage of development.

This workshop will consolidate your knowledge about the neurobiology of trauma, but also extend and deepen it. It is a must for those of you who are wanting to ground your understanding of practice in the evidence that has informed so much of what has transformed the way we support children, young people and adults who have experienced trauma and adverse experiences.

Lisa Dion

Lisa Dion is the creator of Synergetic Play Therapy – a researched-informed model of play therapy based on nervous system regulation, interpersonal neurobiology, physics, attachment, mindfulness, and therapist authenticity. It aims to replicate the delicate dance of attunement that occurs between a caregiver and an infant. It focuses on ensuring that the practitioner's verbalizations and non-verbal activity are congruent during the play therapy sessions in order to transmit trust and safety. In doing so, the approach maximizes right-hemisphere to right-hemisphere communication and acts as an external regulator for children's dysregulated states as they arise in the therapeutic process.

Using hands-on and practical techniques, Lisa will assist the group to trace the moment by moment shifts in regulation between therapist and child, providing a level of insight which supports the transformation of aggression into ways of connecting and mutual trust.

Bonnie Badenoch

Bonnie Badenoch is an in-the-trenches master therapist, supervisor, teacher and author who has spent the last 15 years integrating the discoveries of neuroscience into the art of therapy. Her work as a therapist has focused on helping trauma survivors and those with significant attachment wounds reshape their neural landscape to support a life of meaning and resilience.

This workshop traces the integrated knowledge base that Bonnie brings to her work. It will provide you with the basis for understanding the growing relational approach to trauma recovery, inspired by the neuroscience of safety that has evolved out of the work of Steve Porges, Allan Schore, Dan Siegel and Iain McGilchrist.

Dr Lou Cozolino

Dr Cozolino lectures around the world on brain development, evolution, and psychotherapy and maintains clinical and consulting practices in Los Angeles and New York. His entertaining style and practice wisdom made him a hit at the 2018 International Childhood Trauma Conference.

He will be explaining the development and organisation of the healthy brain and the unhealthy brain and use this lens to explore common problems such as anxiety, trauma, and co-dependency discussed from a scientific and clinical perspective. Throughout the workshop, the science behind the brain's working is applied to day-to-day experiences, school settings and clinical practice.

Bringing insights and application to those working in both therapeutic and education fields of practice, this session is a must for those looking to move from knowledge of research to understanding the practical application in a relational context.
